Ntethelelo Ntetheh "Baby G" Nkosi

Jewll Industries

Boxing has its next champion.

Friday, the 24th of November 2023, saw this young and hungry boxer, Ntethelelo Nkosi, meet a seasoned veteran, Prince Dlomo. The fight was fast paced with Prince scoring multiple knockdowns until round number nine when Ntethelelo Nkosi threw a vicious combination of punches to etch his name in gold and proclaim himself as the new junior South African Welterweight Champion, and thus stamping his official mark in the world of boxing.

Nkosi, with eight fights under his belt, is quickly becoming a household name in the world of boxing. His origins are from KwaZulu-Natal, and he is currently fighting out of Gauteng, under Durandt's Boxing & Fitness gym in Edenvale. Nkosi is well-looked after in the form of mentorship, when it comes to the boxing legends and fanatics in the form of head trainers Damien Durandt, Andson Kazembe and right-hand man Tshepo Lefele.

Ntethelelo Nkosi captured above stopping Prince Dlomo in the ninth round to claim victory.

Ntethelelo Nkosi – The rise to glory

Jewll Industries

Nkosi started chasing his ambitions at the early age of twelve, whilst residing in Khula village, emtubatuba Kwazulu-Natal. From 2009 to 2017 Nkosi was considered an amateur fighter. He accumulated many fights and experiences under his belt until 2018 when he turned pro. Nkosi "Baby G", has had eight professional fights with six wins and two losses, with the most recent fight last Friday, seeing Nkosi rise to glory claiming the junior South African Welterweight Championship.

Jewll Industries was able to speak to the newly crowned champion, to get his comments and thoughts about his recent bout. "I am proud of myself, and it was a wonderful experience. I knew I had to prepare well and get the knockout and that is what I did."
